In the Name of Wilderness:
The preservation polemic in federally designated Wilderness areas

Katherine Anne Longfield

Submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirement for the degree Master of Science in Historic Preservation

Graduate School of Architecture, Planning and Preservation

Columbia University
December, 2007
Table of Contents

Acknowledgements.................................................................ii

Introduction...............................................................................iii

1. "Home, Home on the Range" to "They Paved Paradise and Put up a Parking Lot"
   A brief history of wilderness thinking 1492-1964 .......................1

2. "Country Roads Take Me Home"
   a. Wilderness understandings espoused by the 1964 Wilderness Act and their impacts on cultural resources ..................18
   b. Images of a representative sampling of wilderness cultural resources..................................................33

3. "We Got the Whole World in Our Hands"
   The wilderness discourse 1970s to present and NPS policy toward cultural resources in wilderness..........................52

4. "I'm Fixing a Hole Where the Rain Gets In"
   NPS policy shortcomings and recommendations for improving resource stewardship...........................................77

5. "All God's Creatures Got a Place in the Choir"
   Issues with NPS policy implementation and consequent legal challenges to wilderness cultural resources......................84

6. "The Flower that Shattered the Stone"
   Concluding thoughts on the current state of the preservation of our wilderness heritage........................................106

Appendix
   A- The 2002 White Paper Statement........................................110
   B- LCS Spreadsheet with GIS data percentages..........................115
   C- Washington State Map with Wilderness Cultural Resources......116

Bibliography.............................................................................120